

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This Office for Learning and Teaching National Teaching Fellowship was funded by the Australian Government Department of Education and Training. The Fellowship was also supported by a generous grant from the Council of Australasian University Leaders of Learning and Teaching, (formerly Council of Australian Directors of Academic Development). Without the support of those two organisations, the program of activities of this Fellowship would not have come to fruition.

One of the reasons for the success of my Fellowship and in particular the uptake of Contemporary approaches to university teaching, both by individuals and institutions, is that so very many colleagues across the Australian higher education sector and beyond, contributed to the development and review of the MOOC. I have acknowledged and thanked those colleagues in the relevant sections of this website. Here I would like to acknowledge the work that my colleagues in the Swinburne University of Technology Learning Transformations unit did in bringing the Fellowship to fruition.

My colleague Linden Clarke has worked with me on the Fellowship since the application stage. Linden has gone above and beyond her role ensuring that everything worked and was completed on time. Linden's work has been integral to the success of my Fellowship and I am immensely grateful to her for her unfailing support and good humour.

My colleague Josh Muntz' technical expertise was invaluable in the development of the MOOC. I am grateful to him for the many hours that he dedicated it.

My colleague David Yammouni is a wizard with digital recordings and worked his magic in the challenging scenario of receiving recordings made in different universities, on different devices. I shall be forever indebted to him for stitching different recordings together in a seamless manner.

My thanks to Associate Professor Elizabeth Branigan, Director of the Learning Transformations Unit at Swinburne University of Technology. Liz took over the directorship of the unit at a critical time for the development of the MOOC and I am grateful to her for valuing the work that we were doing and for her ability to magic resources out of thin air.
